Sir,

I have just read your article of May 17 about the case of Linda Carty and her supposedly incompetent lawyer. Before Mr Liptak wrote this article he would have done well to consult one of the two minutely detailed judgments the Texas Court of Appeal has published on-line. Instead of researching the facts he has written a polemic directed against Carty's lawyer, who is blamed in so many words for her predicament; in writing this article, Mr Liptak has merely rehashed the propaganda of the Reprieve organisation, who have filled both the print and broadcast media on this side of the Atlantic with the same sort of diatribes supplemented by proven lies about Carty's supposed innocence.

Linda Carty masterminded this terrible crime, and if her co-defendants had been as ruthless as she was, three people would have been dead instead of one.

Some of Carty's other supporters are just as willing as Reprieve to twist the truth. After I began publishing rebuttals of their lies on FaceBook I was reported for posting under a false name, and in spite of sending in the demanded documentation and writing to CEO Mark Zuckerberg in person, I have still not managed to restore my access to this site.

Yours Sincerely,
A Baron
